Introduction

Accreditation relies on establishing technical competence of healthcare organisations in terms of accreditation standards in delivering services with respect to its scope. It focuses on learning, selfdevelopment, improved performance and reducing risk. Accreditation is based on optimum standards, professional accountability and encourages healthcare organisations to pursue continual excellence. It has been experienced that healthcare organisations, once accredited, tend to relax and at times even lose focus. It wakes up only when it gets notice about a surveillance visit from the accreditation board. It is important that organisations need to focus on ensuring that the accreditation process is institutionalised to keep the system improving on a continuous basis and therefore need for internal audit

Course Methodology

Audit is defined as 'A systematic and independent examination to determine whether quality activities and related results comply with planned arrangements and whether these planned arrangements are implemented effectively and are suitable to achieve the objectives set by the organization.' Auditors need to be formally trained to have understanding of standard and also have skills to carry out audit in an objective manner. AHPI has designed an intensive 3-days program which besides covering the salient points of NABH standard provides in-depth understanding of the audit process including the audit techniques. The course is full of exercises and case studies. The participants are guided to carry out an audit in an actual HCO to get a real feel of it.

Target Participants

It is important that healthcare organisations at the time of implementing the accreditation standard, involve all the clinical consultants, administrators, nursing staff and above all the management. Therefore, the trained internal auditors should be chosen from all the functional departments like, Registration, OPD, Wards, ICU, OTs, Pathology Laboratory, Radiology, Records, Paramedics and Facility etc. The participants for the course accordingly should be chosen among; Clinicians, Administrators, Quality, Nursing, Diagnostic Staff, BioMedical Engineers, Maintenance Staff, Paramedical Supervisory Staff etc.
